injury-related deaths in the U.S. by the year 2003. It costs more than $14,000...

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Time.

SENATOR KIEL: ...to treat each child wounded by gunfire, and this would maybe relate to brain gain. That would be enough to pay for a full year of private college.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Time.

SENATOR KIEL: Thank you.

SPEAKER KRISTENSEN: Thank you. Senator Tyson.

SENATOR TYSON: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, members of the body.
This has been very, very educational for me because having had firearms and shooting sports as my principal hobby for quite a number of years, I find out all sorts of things here I never knew before. Senator Robinson, who expresses his fear and I think contempt of his fellow citizens in Blair cites an authority, the chief of police, the chief of police who is carrying a gun. Senator Kiel cites a long list of the FOP and the POAN and the ABC and the MNO and all the rest of them, and they don't want anybody carrying a concealed weapon except themselves. And I might add that those police have been relieved of any duty to respond to a call by a number of courts in this land, including the US Circuit Court of Appeals. The chief of police, or whoever it was that she was citing, and it doesn't really matter, says they don't want law-abiding citizens carrying guns. Well, now if the law-abiding citizens can't carry them and the criminals can, which is one of the reasons they are criminals, the individuals who on occasion may need a gun won't have it, and the police, and there's...Senator Wesely passed out a deal about how long it took the police to respond to a legitimate call. I think it was like 25 minutes. There is no point in them coming by that time. Senator Chambers, who gets up and...Senator Chambers, is...yeah, there you are, Senator Chambers emotes. I was worried about him here a little while ago, I thought he was going to be...get his heartbeat up to where, you know, it'd be dangerous, but he doesn't want the
